

Interview with Running Man Part 2 - Transcript

Insider51: Welcome back to They Do Not Come in Peace.

Before we get into the next segment with Running Man, I want to talk a bit about the name of my show. I know some of you out there think it's a joke and that I'm some kind of loony conspiracy nut. But some of you might know some of the Truth, but choose to believe They are peaceful. You're both wrong. Let me assure you, They do exist, and They do not have the best intentions when it comes to the human race. Don't believe me? Look back at our own history. What happens when a technologically advanced civilization (Them) comes in contact with a more primitive culture (us)? If you don't know, just ask the Native Americans or the Aztecs.

So, I want you to really listen to what Running Man has to say. If what he says is true, and our government is willing to trade the lives of its own citizens for a technological advantage over other nations, then folks, we really need to get organized. We're fighting the good fight here. The more people know the more power we have. That's why I do this. That's why I risk my own safety to get the message out. I want to empower you, my readers and listeners, to help me blow this thing wide open.

INSIDER51: The last time we spoke, you really dropped a bomb on us. To summarize, you said our government is working with extraterrestrials at a secret underground base called Subterra Bravo, where you once served as a guard. You also said that the aliens are doing some kind of genetic research on abducted U.S. citizens. So my next question is kind of obvious. Did you ever see one of these aliens?

RUNNING MAN: Yes...I mean, no. I mean, yeah I saw them, kinda, twice actually, but not the real aliens. It's complicated.

INSIDER51: Just take your time and spell it out.

RUNNING MAN: Okay. Okay. See, there aren't very many of the real aliens...you know, the ones that actually came from...from...wherever it is...

INSIDER51: Space? Another planet?

RUNNING MAN: Yeah, whatever. But there are a bunch of these clones. And I guess they're aliens...or maybe not, it depends on where they were made. The guys use to argue about this all the time, you know, if they're made of alien stuff but got born on Earth, are they aliens?

INSIDER51: Yeah, that'll make your head spin.

RUNNING MAN: They don't look the same. I mean, the clones all look the same, but they don't look like the real aliens. That's what everyone said. They're smaller, I guess.

INSIDER51: Why're the aliens making clones?

RUNNING MAN: They need more help, I think. More manpower.

INSIDER51: So you never saw the real aliens, but you saw these clones that might been made on Earth?

RUNNING MAN: Uh huh.

INSIDER51: What do the clones look like?

RUNNING MAN: Well, like what you think aliens look like, right? Skinny, big heads, big eyes. But...worse. Like what you think they would look like, but also not. I uh...I hope I never see them again.

INSIDER51: Did you talk to any? Were you ever close to one?

RUNNING MAN: The first time it was pretty far away. We were doing a volunteer transfer through the quarantine. One was in the elevator inside the airlock, but it was through glass and hazy inside because of this sterilization stuff they spray in there. But I could tell it wasn't human. No way. It wasn't.

INSIDER51: What about your second encounter?

RUNNING MAN: ...

INSIDER51: Running Man? You still there? Tell us about the second time you saw one of these things.

RUNNING MAN: It was close.

INSIDER51: How close?

RUNNING MAN: Real close. It was just looking at me. Watching. Through a vent, you know, the air duct in the ceiling.

INSIDER51: Through the vent?

RUNNING MAN: Yeah. Every once in a while, they'd go where they're not supposed to. Sometimes they'd get a volunteer.

INSIDER51: What do you mean, 'get a volunteer'?

RUNNING MAN: They'd get one. Cut her up. Take...you know, parts from her insides.

INSIDER51: Hang on. So, these alien clones don't generally have freedom to move around the base, but they get out sometimes? Is that what you're saying? And sometimes, when they get out, they attack innocent people, kill them, and take, what, organs? Is this all correct?

RUNNING MAN: Yes.

INSIDER51: What the hell is going on in that place?

RUNNING MAN: <clears throat>

INSIDER51: And then you find yourself looking at one of these things? Or rather, it's looking at you, checking you out through a vent. What did you do?

RUNNING MAN: I ran.

INSIDER51: Okay, so these things, these clones, were obviously very dangerous. It certainly doesn't seem like the military is in complete control here. Did any ever attack the guards or other military personnel?

RUNNING MAN: I knew a guy, Arnie - ah, I mean, just one of the other soldiers. He got in a fight with one, once. It didn't attack him, it was over a volunteer that got loose. Anyhow, Arn - I mean, the soldier, took some shots at it.

INSIDER51: This soldier tried to shoot one of the clones?

RUNNING MAN: Yeah. But you can't. They mess with your mind and you can't shoot'em.

INSIDER51: What are you saying? These things have some sort of mind control or mental powers?

RUNNING MAN: Sort of. It's hard to describe. I only just heard about it.

INSIDER51: So, these mental powers, then? Is this something the government is trying to develop? I mean, there's been speculation about the government using mind control on the population for decades. Is it real? Does this technology exist?

RUNNING MAN: Look, I was just a soldier. I didn't have access -

INSIDER51: But you were on the inside! You saw stuff the rest of us have only had nightmares about. This is serious, man. Is the government using alien mind control technology?

<PHONE INTERFERENCE THAT SOUNDS LIKE A DOUBLE-CLICK>

RUNNING MAN: What was that?

INSIDER51: What was what?

RUNNING MAN: ...

INSIDER51: Did you hear something?

RUNNING MAN: I have to go.

INSIDER51: Wait! Just a few more seconds. The mind control stuff. The alien powers. Yes or no? Does the government have it?

<CLICK>

Damn it! Can we get him back?

...

Okay, it looks we've lost Running Man again, but he's sure left us with a lot to think about. Don't worry folks, he'll be back next week, and we'll once again be broadcasting the truth They don't want you to know.
